

DEMON SERIES

Ever since the Neorebel Series was introduced last year, drummers and dealers have been calling for expanded offerings of drums with black painted hardware. Black, apparently, is the new black. With a look that has emphatically connected with younger as well as many seasoned players, the success of the Neorebel Series – and its striking departure from traditional drum set appearance – has led to the development of The Demon kit. A kit that offers both style and substance, the Demon champions affordability, radically stylish looks, and Peace's renowned killer sound. Constructed at Peace by the same hands that build Peace's marquis series like Paragon, Kahuna, and DNA, the Demon kit benefits from the same meticulous craftsmanship. Shells are constructed of select mahogany; bass and snare are nine ply shells, while toms are six. The famously musical tone of the wood is realized through the careful shell formation process and precision lathing and sanding of the bearing edges. Shells are standard sizes favored in contemporary music. Whether one is sitting behind the kit, playing alongside it in the band, or as an audience spectator, the auditory experience is much greater than one would expect from such an affordable drum set. The kit sounds great! A complete five-piece outfit including steel cymbals, throne, and sticks, the Demon has ravenplate, double-braced stands (hi-hat and cymbal stand) and a matching basket-style snare stand. Together with the black hardware on the kit, the visual effect is thoroughly striking! Lightweight, rugged composite components, including Peace's new DA-180 claws are also a giveaway that this is not your father's old-fashioned drum set. The cost-conscious student in search of value and inspiration need look no further.
